Q: Should I explicitly unlock a song in iTunes? So whenever I buy a song, it plays automatically without asking me. I like that functionality, but I understand that I am consuming bandwidth and is it okay to leave it unlocked for a while after buying a song? A: It's normal when you buy anything in iTunes. As long as you're not connected to the internet, the file won't change. If you're not connected to the internet, then the file won't change. It's your judgement call whether you want to keep the music playing while you have wifi access or not. Let's start small. Can you use the Arduino along with a smartphone? No problem; we have just the right device for your Arduino project. I recently spent a day with the Go! Starter Kit, a low-cost kit from Adafruit that includes an RGB LED, a GO button (an essential component for the Arduino!), an adjustable potentiometer, an LCD display, and a buzzer. The starter kit is an excellent first step into learning the Arduino! Read the rest In this section of the Arduino post, we will build a clock using the actuate pin on the Arduino and a single LED. If you're a seasoned Arduino builder, you may have figured out that the actuate pin is effectively used to perform an action rather than perform a change. For example, the actuate pin will perform an action when using the analog pins to read or read values of the analog pins. In the end, this is really the same as reading the status of the pin and making it active or inactive. The #1 benefit of this type of circuit is that you can use the same 'clock' circuit to build other clocks for different parts of the house. These can be really flexible to build, and don't require you to go to the hassle of an external clock/control device. Read the restQ: jQuery touchpoint event start and end I am experimenting with jQuery mobile. I am trying to play around with the touchpoint event. When I click for instance on an image it will start a timer and that works great. But if I then start clicking on a different image the timer is not stopped, but when I try to touch another image it is stopped. I think I need to distinguish between when I start and end a touch. Any ideas? $('trigger').
